www.payhembury-weather.co.uk

Rainfall: November was a bit drier than average but it did rain most days and December has so far been slightly wetter with several storms passing by and more forecast.

Temperatures: November was a warm month but December has started with some frosty nights reaching 3 degC below freezing that killed off my herbaceous plants. Its warmed up though in mid December so a white Christmas looking unlikely.

Weather elsewhere: Parts of Scotland experienced ‘thunder snow’ on 4 December and more than 3 m of snow fell on the Alps but I don’t suppose many will be able to ski on it. As I write this the N.E. of the United States is experiencing a severe snow storm with nearly a metre falling in New York state. In contrast Australian bush fires are back with residents of Fraser Island off the Queensland coast being told to evacuate.
